ABOUT

Medicine Wheel Education was founded by Teddy Anderson, a multicultural individual that grew up in the Red Deer area amongst many cultures. Teddy was given the sacred permission to perform, teach and share the traditional First Nation's Hoop Dance while spending time at the Red Deer Aboriginal Dance Troupe. Teddy has continued some of his training with Kevin Locke, Lakota hoop dancer. Teddy and his family have been adopted into the Tagish/Carcross First Nation's. Teddy belongs to the Deishitaan clan and given the name Yéil S'aaghí (Crow Bones). In all of Teddy's travels he found there is a significant lack of First Nation's resources in schools and there was a deep need from the larger community to understand First Nation's culture.

To respond to this need Medicine Wheel Education was born, a company that delivers on culturally authentic books, resources and tools specialized for teachers and schools. The content of Medicine Wheel Education has been written and/or approved by First Nation's Elders and/or Peoples. We know that these cultural stories will make a positive difference in the world of education.
